

Final Reflections

The PMP Collective Reflections, Future Directions engagement process began in the shadow of a difficult and polarized community issue that was often framed as a stark binary on the future of the PMP: preserve it, or remove it. Over the course of seven months, through thousands of contributions, conversations, and courageous acts of participation, the community moved beyond this binary.

Residents of Wilmot Township came forward to live the values that guided this process: to listen, share, learn, and engage.

- They listened not just to those they agreed with, but to neighbours with different perspectives, different histories, and different experiences of the Prime Ministers Path.
- They shared their memories, their pride, their pain, their fears, and their hopes for what the future could hold.
- They learned by taking part in tea circles, gatherings, and surveys that asked difficult questions and encouraged deeper reflection on history, identity, and belonging.
- They engaged by trusting the process enough to return to a challenging conversation, by joining the Working Group, by filling out surveys, and by contributing ideas for a future shaped by community voice.
